President Joe Biden has set an ambitious goal of getting 70 percent of US adults at least one dose of COVID-19 vaccine by July 4, as some states struggle to overcome vaccine hesitancy.

- The US last week backed intellectual property waivers for COVID-19 vaccines, but has faced pressure from allies to deploy more already-made doses globally
- A major US pipeline remained out of commission on Monday following a cyberattack
- A semi-independent panel has recommended that Facebook continue its suspension of former President Donald Trump, but called on the company to review the decision within six months

With tensions flaring over forced Palestinian expulsions in the Sheikh Jarrah neighbourhood in occupied East Jerusalem, we examine how calls for conditioning US aid to Israel are becoming less taboo in Washington.

In Washington, a debate grows over conditioning aid to Israel

Progressive lawmakers and Palestine advocates say discourse is shifting around $3.8bn in annual US assistance to Israel.

Trump's 'mini revolution' is missing a megaphone

Out of office and without social media, Trump's voice at the moment only echoes among his die-hard supporters.

US legislators call on Biden to help raise funds for Yemen

After a United Nations donor conference for Yemen fell short, key US senators are pushing for more humanitarian aid.

Do worker workplaces await mothers who quit jobs due to pandemic?

Though the US economy is recovering, the pandemic may have cost women, especially working mothers, years of progress in the workplace.
